AIRSHIPS MAY BRING WORLD FREE TRADE.

Robert J. Thompson Says With Aerial Commerce Collections of Customs Will Be Impossible.

PROSPECTS ON THE RESULTS.

Revolution in Laws and Trade to Fellow When World's Fair $160,000 Prize is Won, Mr. Thompson Says.

"Commercial revolution will follow the advent of nerlal navigation; customs duties will be wited out and social merging o the races will come with the fading away of frontiers marking the boundaries between nations," says Robert J. Thomps: secretary of the United States Lafayette Memorial Commission, in speaking of the universal discussion aroused by the St. Louis Exposition's offer of $100,000 for the ploneer airship.

Mr. Thompsen, who is renewing old acnaintances among the official staff of the World's Fair, arranged all the details dur-ing the Paris Exposition of 1809 for the Disposing of a Trainland presentation of the statue of Marquis Lafayette to France on behalf of the school children of America. He was one of the several Americans officially connected with the United States section of the Exposition to be decorated by President Loubet with the Order of the Legion of Honor,

The airship will have its conquests of peace as well as of war," said Mr. Thompson. "Universal free trade will be estab-lished the day when the world is told that Santos-Dumont or some one else has grasped the secret of the air and that all may ride supreme through the ether. Before my departure from Paris Count Vauly, an aerostatician of note, discussed this phase of aerial navigation with me. Military students of foreign Governments have long sought to discover a secret whereby they might direct an acrial craft at will so as to destroy their enemies from the clouds. The science of war, therefore, is practically in the future phyship Possibility of Private Airships. "But what about the things which the navigation of the element enveloping the earth my disclose? The successful airship means the building of countless crafts of the gir.

"Commerce will awake to infinite possibilities. The fine old honor of the world will not stop at escaping customs duties by imaging highly dutable articles across the frontiers. Who is to prevent the high-class smuggler from loading his pirate craft of the air with a diamond cargo and darting from England into France, or from France to Germany, so hidden among the clouds that no telescope of the most alert customs observer may detect the contraband voyage. Then, in some remote and unfrequented spot, a safe landing can be made for the discharge of the illegal freight.

"Our quick-witted friends may say that Government aertal revenue cutters could do police duty in the skies, arrest the pirate "Commerce will awake to infinite possi-police duty in the skies, arrest the pirate by boarding him in parachutes and drop down to the fastnesses of prisons on terra firma. Very good, but how about stolen fights in the night or even in the day through the cloud wracks? What a game of dosiging among the mists of midheaven would be played by the aerial smuggler with the Government cruiser lying to in a gentle breeze, watchful for the contraband. We, who have studied the science of aerostytics may see the difficulties. of aerostatics may see the difficulties which might confront the chaser if he was not in the current attained by the chased, and could not reach that current without such tacking as would confound the doughtiest skipper on the main.

"Then the merchant who stayed on the ground and upheld the laws by shipping his goods in the good old-fashioned way of steam railway and ocean liner; would be be content to pay his duty in the face of the enormous competition arising from the successful smuggling of luxuries? Any one who knows the frailties of the business world will laugh at the idea, He would re-

who knows the frailties of the business world will laugh at the idea. He would remonstrate; he would demand that the illegal traffic be stopped at the expense of his purse. Then he would demand that all duty be abrogated. And the pressure of wealth and political influence would bring about free trade, and the commercial policy of English statesmen would have been vindicated.

"The countries of the world would now have to fail back on their internal revenue to satisfy the national debt. The principles of those who have long advocated that the individual and the nation should be able to sustain themselves on what they produced themselves, without resort to taxing external trade and its reciprocal features, would have been set right by that 'crank' idea of flying like a bird. In the minds of aerostaticians who have made a life study of aerial navigation, the day of discovery is not so far distant as the increduious may assume. Whether the dirigible halloon or the aeroplane solves the problem, the complete revision of commerce and society is certain to fake place."

Mr. Thempson says that the theme of free trade being made possible through the success of aerial navigation, has become the leading topic of discussion in the Aeroatic Club of Paris, which numbers M. Henri Deutsch, Santes-Dumont, Count De Vaulx and other prominent aerostaticians in its membersiop.

A prominent manufacturer has offered a prize of $1,000 for the best enough on preventive medicine, "believing that a proper exercise of preventive medicine is of medicinable benefit to the human race." The tendency of medicial science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlan's Cough Remeuy. Pneumonia atways results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevaience of colis and grip in recent years, and can be reited upon with implicit confidence.—Adv.
